Point-and-speak wallet card for emergency evacuation in multiple languages

The language barrier is a formidable obstacle for foreign residents with little experience with Japan's natural disasters and limited knowledge of evacuation shelter locations and procedures. As emergency information is often disseminated only in Japanese, the inability to obtain crucial information can be disastrous. This multi-language card can help alleviate some of those difficulties, facilitating communication with locals in the event of emergency evacuation, aiding in the understanding of emergency shelter rules, and reducing the potential for misunderstanding and conflict. The card is available in English, Chinese, Vietnamese and Burmese and can be downloaded for free at our website.

Central Tottori trash sorting rule guide in easy Japanese

Following the lead of Eastern Tottori, a trash sorting guide is now available for the Central region. With certain types of trash classified as plastic in the Eastern region but as combustibles in Central, and specific rules for Kurayoshi City differing from surrounding municipalities, this guide is invaluable. Simplified vocabulary and expressions and illustrations make the rules easy for everyone to understand. Through proper sorting with the help of this guide, Tottori's foreign residents can enjoy better integration into the local community.
